WGA building new HQ

The Western Golf Association is moving – but not far. Enscorced in their stately digs in Golf since 1955, the WGA long ago outgrew the building, even after an addition was tacked on. Two satellite offices, one in Oak Brook for tournament operations and the other in downtown Chicago for fundraising, attest to that.

By the fall, everyone in the WGA and Evans Scholars Foundation will be under one roof, at 2501 Patriot Drive in Glenview, about two miles from their old home and around the corner from The Glen Club.

Ground was broken on the 25,000-square foot building last fall, and while movement during the harsh winter was slow, the pace has picked up post-Polar Vortex.

WGA officials haven't said a word about the new building or the fundraising for it, in order not to take away from donations to the educational fund that is approaching its 2020 goal of 1,000 scholars in college, which will be a first for the program.

Noted archive display designer Andy Mutch is creating the displays for the lobby and other areas of the building.

The story of the new construction was broken by Rory Spears of GolfersOnGolf.com.

A new tenant is being sought for the current building in Golf, which also houses the U.S. Post Office and the village hall for the town of under 500 residents.

Jenkins his Ownself

If, from roughly 1962 to 1984, you wanted your golf writing presented to you on fine china and were prodded to use the proper fork to turn the page, you read Herbert Warren Wind in The New Yorker. Wind, the brilliant wordsmith from Yale, he of the tweed jacket on a 95-degree day at Southern Hills, used the Queen's English so effectively, even her majesty would be impressed.

If, during that same time, you wanted your golf writing to tumble off the page like peppers atop an overstuffed barbecue sandwich, you read Dan Jenkins in Sports Illustrated. Jenkins, the brilliant wordsmith from Texas Christian, he of the smoldering Winston in one hand and the scotch in the other, used the Queen's English so effectively, even Ben Hogan was impressed.

Wind wrote sonnets. Jenkins composed free-verse country music minus the howling dog.

Both specialized in golf eventually but could write about anything. Wind wrote of Larry Bird and Pete Rozelle and many other notables for The New Yorker. Jenkins, who worked his way from his hometown Fort Worth Press to the Dallas Times-Herald to SI, was a superb football writer, especially on the college game, which he grew up adoring and never lost his ardor for.

Jenkins, on the 10-10 tie between Notre Dame and Michigan State in 1966: "Old Notre Dame will tie after all. Sing it out, guys. That is not exactly what the march says, of course, but that is how the big game ends every time you replay it. And that is how millions of cranky college football fans will remember it."

Jenkins, on the tumultuous 1971 Nebraska-Oklahoma game on a cold Thanksgiving Day in Norman: "The spectacle itself was for everybody, of course, for all of those who had been waiting weeks for Nebraska to meet Oklahoma, or for all the guys with their big stomachs and bigger Stetsons, and for all the luscious coeds who danced through the afternoons drinking daiquiris out of paper cups."

His golf coverage was as salient, if not more so. He got inside the heads of Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus, lauded their genius and poked them when they failed – especially if someone sans pedigree was winning a major championship.

The last thing Jenkins wanted was to memorialize the exploits of a George Archer. As Jenkins wrote of Archer's triumph in the 1969 Masters, "It was his first major championship, just as it had been for (Gay) Brewer and (Bob) Goalby, and he won by battling down the stretch with a ragtag group of escapees from some distant Citrus Open on the regular professional tour. What ever happened to the Masters we all knew and loved? Only the gurus can tell."

Perhaps the only sportswriter with as many or more original lines that would inflame or prompt a guffaw was Jim Murray, whose greatest throw-away line, "Gentlemen, start your coffins," in the middle of a column previewing an Indianapolis 500, resonates even now.

Murray wrote one-liners one after the other, a stand-up comic in print. On his best days, he rivaled Johnny Carson.

Jenkins connected his thoughts like a steel cable, winding the tension throughout a piece until the finish. The last three-plus decades, he did so for Golf Digest, eventually becoming a master of Twitter.

Jenkins died on Thursday, March 6, the evening of the first round of the Arnold Palmer Invitational. He was 89, and back in Fort Worth, having fallen a few days before. His death prompted an outpouring of huzzahs and memories from fellow scribes, who properly placed him on the Mount Olympus of sportswriters. In golf, his peers were Wind and a pair of Brits, Bernard Darwin and Henry Longhurst. Pick up anything from any of the four and it is as crisp today as when it came off the press.

Jenkins' humor was of its time, and the more sensitive may not like his novels, which were laced with perfectly-played profanities, or a handful of other comments. But he refused to write for the white-glove crowd, even as he revered golf's cathedrals, from Pine Valley to Cypress Point to Augusta National.

Jenkins once wrote, "I don't suppose anybody's ever enjoyed being who they are more than Arnold Palmer's enjoyed being Arnold Palmer." Anyone who shared a press tent with Dan Jenkins knew he could say the same thing about his Ownself.

INAUGURAL AUGUSTA NATIONAL WOMEN'S AMATEUR

Kupcho beats Fassi in historic duel among the flowers

FROM IG NEWS SERVICES

REPORTING FROM AUGUSTA, GEORGIA

Kupcho vs. Fassi sounds like a duel of middleweights going 12 rounds at Madison Square Garden in the 1950s, when boxing was still relevant.

Instead, it was a duel of two women among the flora and fauna of the Augusta National Golf Club, on a day when women's amateur golf became relevant.

Jennifer and Maria are their first names, and their accomplishment on Saturday, April 6, will not be forgotten. In the end, it was Jennifer Kupcho, a 21-year-old from Westminster, Colo., and senior at Wake Forest, scoring a splendid 5-under-par 67 to triumph in the inaugural Augusta National Women's Amateur. Kupcho's 54-hole aggregate of 10-under 206 earned her a four-stroke victory over Fassi, a native of Mexico who posted 2-under 70 for 210.

It was compelling golf, and all the more remarkable given the 30 players making the cut had played only one practice round at Augusta, having played the first two rounds at nearby Champions Retreat Golf Club a few miles away. Yet Kupcho, having battled through a migraine headache that blurred her vision midway through the round, rallied to catch and pass Fassi with a back nine charge worthy of a Masters Sunday. She played the last six holes in 5-under 20, starting with the only eagle of the tournament on the par-5 13th via a 211-yard 3-wood to 12 feet. Then came birdies on the 15th – nearly making eagle from off the green – and 16th, and finally a 25-foot birdie putt at the last for an inward 32 that dazzled the gallery on the course and those watching on television.

Fassi played very well. Kupcho played like a champion.

“I never even thought of laying up,” Kupcho said of her first look at her sidehill lie on the 13th fairway. “

The eagle was the swing in momentum. Fassi had birdied five of her first 14 holes, and still led after a birdie on the 14th, but Kupcho was unstoppable. They combined for a best-ball score of 11-under 61.

“Even starting on 1, I knew it was going to be like that,” Fassi said. “I knew who I was playing against, and it was just so much fun. We joked at the beginning. We’re like, let’s make sure we put up a show for people and we did.”

While it was mostly a two-women race in the final round, six players finished under par, with three more at level par 216, including Haley Moore, a senior at Arizona who lives in Escondido, Calif., but was born in Crystal Lake. Moore, who made the cut in the ANA Inspiration in 2015 as a 16-year-old, but couldn’t pass up playing at Augusta, and made the most of it with a final-

For Illinois-connected players, consolation prize is Augusta round

BY LEN ZIEHM

REPORTING FROM EVANS, GEORGIA

The good news is that three women with Illinois connections were among the 72 in the inaugural Augusta National Women's Amateur.

The bad news is that none did well enough to survive the 36-hole cut. Illinois' Tristyn Nowlin, Northwestern's Stephanie Lao and Missouri's Jessica Yuen, from Bolingbrook, earned selections into the elite international field. None came close to being in the top 30 to play in the final round at storied Augusta National.

Nowlin, Lao and Yuen battled for two rounds at Champions Retreat, the site for the first 36 holes on Augusta's outskirts. They played a practice round a day later at Augusta National. Then their tournament was over, but all felt the experience was a good one.

Nowlin, an Illini junior and runner-up in last year's Women's Western Amateur, tied for 52nd and was 9-over-par for the tournament and six shots shy of the cut line. Lao, in her final season at Northwestern, tied for 69th. Yuen had tied for 71st. Neither Lao nor Yuen could break 80 in the second round.

"I have to keep in mind that it was special to be part of something historic and play a small part in it," said Lao, named the Big Ten Women's Golfer of the Week on her showing at Arizona State's tournament prior to ANWA week.

LAO ON TARGET Northwestern's Stephanie Lao rolls a long putt at Champions Retreat.

She shared medalist honors in that one, and left for Northwestern's next tournament – the Silverado Showdown in California – after completing her practice round at Augusta National.

Lao will enter the professional ranks after the season. She looked on Augusta as a good learning experience.

"I just try to look at it on a micro level and a macro level," she said. "On the macro level I have to remember the big picture. On the micro level, it's still golf at the end of the day. I'm just trying to hone my skills and enjoy it as long as I can."

Nowlin was off to the Clemson Invitational after getting in her first competition of 2019 at Champions Retreat. She had been recovering from February wrist surgery.

"I'm very glad to be back in competition," she said. Her Illini team still has the Big Ten tournament and NCAA coming up.

Like Nowlin, Yuen has battled a wrist injury and received her ANWA invitation only a week before. She was a late invitee after a player withdrew because of injury.

"I wasn't fully aware of this tournament until I got there," Yuen said. "It was huge, bigger than the U.S. Amateur."

At first, though, she wasn't sure she should go because her game was struggling

"I'm glad I got the phone call," she said. "I earned my way in, and my coach said I had to go. Playing there was been great. I was so honored to be there."

Players from 25 countries participated in the tournament.

Winner Jennifer Kupcho and runner-up Maria Fassi had both earned their LPGA cards, but deferred the start of their pro careers until after the college season is over.

Chips off the old block

Giangrossi's tie for 5th best among Illinois qualifiers

REPORTING FROM AUGUSTA, GEORGIA

Luciano Giangrossi's experience with chipping on a tough golf course paid off on Sunday, April 7, at Augusta National Golf Club. The 9-year-old from Evanston who calls Whistling Straits in Wisconsin his favorite course led his division in chipping in the 6th Drive, Chip and Putt National Finals.

Those 10 points helped him into a tie for fifth in the Boys 7-9 Division. Giangrossi was sixth in driving and ninth in putting, the latter competition staged on Augusta National's 18th green.

Giangrossi, a hockey player in season, was the highest finisher of the four Chicago-area competitors in the 80-person field. The others:

- Lillian She, 9, Buffalo Grove, finished seventh in the Girls 7-9 Division, finishing fourth in driving, eighth in chipping and fifth in putting.

- Joseph Luchtenburg, 13, West Chicago, tied for eighth in the Boys 12-13 Division. He was 10th in driving, sixth in chipping and ninth in putting.

- Joshua Pehl, 14, Sugar Grove, finished 10th in the Boys 14-15 Division, taking ninth in driving, eighth in chipping and 10th in putting.

All four won their regional qualifiers to advance to the final round.

"We are thrilled to have four local junior players qualify for the national finals at Augusta from our PGA Section," said Illinois PGA executive director Carrie Williams. "Drive, Chip and Putt is such a wonderful program and competition for young players to test their skills and have fun."

Drive, Chip and Putt started as an Illinois PGA creation, the Youth Skills Challenge, held at Medinah Country Club before the 2006 PGA Championship. It was held again before the 2012 Ryder Cup at Medinah – Pehl was first in his age group there – when PGA of America officials took note. Soon, the USGA and Augusta National got involved, and the Drive, Chip and Putt competition began with qualifying in 2013 with the first finals held at Augusta National in 2014.

The road to Augusta for 2020 starts with 313 local qualifiers in all 50 states this summer. For information, see www.drivechipandputt.com.

Taking the fifth

Rebuilt hole could be pivotal in 83rd Masters

Augusta National Golf Club's sneaky-tough and often ignored fifth hole has been lengthened 40 yards, and the green with the buried elephants seen here has been softened. The combination creates a nearly-new hole for the elite field in golf's most fabled tournament.

TEXT AND PHOTOGRAPHY BY TIM CRONIN

The back nine has the spotlight, but the front nine packs a punch, especially the fourth through sixth holes

Dan Jenkins, the tremendous typer from Texas whose name has come up often since his passing, once noted that the fifth hole at Augusta National Golf Club was “way out there somewhere, out and up and back, crawling silently along, a shadow on the map that might just as well indicate a manganese mine in the Ukraine or a gorilla sanctuary in Uganda.”

This is, as a real estate salesman will bend your ear about, location, location, location.

The fifth hole, see – or don’t see – is at a far point on the property from the clubhouse and the big gate that most spectators, patronizing or not, stroll in through. What’s more, the fifth hole has competition. The green is next to the sixth tee, which means the sixth green is down the big hill, and a flip-wedge from the sixth green is the 16th green, which draws more attention than the entire front nine put together.

The 16th, with its history of legendary exploits by Jack Nicklaus, Tiger Woods and Verne Lundquist, is a tourist attraction on a par with Cedar Point and Sea World. Even the swells hanging out and gobbling up oysters in Berckman’s Place, the $6,000-a-ticket hangout on the other side of the hedged fence, turn up their noses at the mere thought of climbing to the fifth. They can get there easily, but the preferred garden path to the golf course proper arrives them at the 16th tee. But of course.

The fifth hole, the center of a three-hole stretch that might well be called Calamity Corner, is for golf nuts, architecture buffs, and masochists. In the persimmon and balata year of 1972,

Take Five

How the fifth has played since 2007

2007 – 4.314 – 8th	2013 – 4.227 – 5th
2008 – 4.230 – 6th	2014 – 4.115 – 11th
2009 – 4.127 – 7th	2015 – 4.145 – 8th
2010 – 4.313 – 1st	2016 – 4.215 – 10th
2011 – 4.155 – 8th	2017 – 4.212 – 5th
2012 – 4.213 – 7th	2018 – 4.164 – 6th

when Jenkins put it on the Missing Golf Holes list, the fifth weighed in at 450 yards, which meant a big slightly-uphill drive into a fairway swinging to the left, the landing area guarded by a pair of bunkers roughly the size of moon craters. The bonus trouble was the wooded dropoff to the left of the bunkers affectionately known as the Delta Air Lines reservation counter. Hit a ball down there, and you’re gone.

The bunkers had been moved toward the green in 2003 by Tom Fazio in the midst of the Tigerproofing efforts ordered by Hootie Johnson, but even last year, the fifth was billed at 455 yards, the tee still immediately behind the fourth green.

No longer, unless you’re a member. Now the toonimint tee is across the road. Or where there used to be a road. Augusta National, more a principality than a closely-held for-profit company with a golf course, had been buying up the property across Berckmans Road for years, rebuilt the road to the west a few years ago, and last summer pulled the trigger on extending the fifth. The tee was moved back 40 yards, across the old road, and now the hole is listed at 495 yards, still a par-4, only now with sharper teeth.

How much sharper? In this year’s Masters program, Sergio Garcia noted that he’d hit anything from 6- to 8-iron in, depending on the pin placement and the wind. On Monday of this week’s tournament, Dustin Johnson, a much longer driver than Garcia, hit a 7-iron to a front-right pin – an easy placement never used in the tournament itself. But the previous week, Johnson played twice into the wind and needed 4-iron to get to the back of the green.

“I thought it was a hard hole before,” Johnson said. “They just made it a little bit tougher. It’s a long golf hole.”

It’s not like the fifth hole was a pushover. The scoring average on “Magnolia” was 4.164 strokes last year, and it’s perennially over par. In 2010, it was the toughest hole in relation to par.

Getting to the middle of the fairway is one thing. Getting to the proper spot on the green is quite another. The story goes that Bobby Jones and architect Alister MacKenzie modeled the fifth on the Road Hole at St. Andrews. That famed penultimate hole features a drive over a corner of the Old Course Hotel that mimics the railroad shed that stood there in the 1800s – the two bunkers stand in for that at Augusta – and an approach that must avoid not only the road, but the devilishly-

At Augusta, the stand-in for that was since the course opened an apparent elephant burial ground on the front third of the green. Wrote Ben Crenshaw in the 2011 program, “The green is one of the most unusual, beautiful greens I’ve ever seen. I love the way Jones described how the contours of the green spill over into the fairway in front. Even players who have been here many times will face a putt or a chip and say to themselves, ‘Well, I’ve never had this one before.’ It’s part of the beauty of the hole.”

Beauty has received a facelift. The mound has been lowered. Garcia likely won’t have any more eight-foot breaks on a putt across the hump, as he did in escaping with par when he won in 2017.

“The green is a little bit less severe, but you’re coming in with a much longer iron,” Johnson said.

Jordan Spieth, struggling to regain his form while chasing a second Masters title, admits being vexed by the redo.

“I’m struggling a little bit right now on how to play the hole, so I’ll have to figure that out over the next couple days,” Spieth said Monday.

“It’s become-- between there and 11, I may even consider 5 a more difficult hole now,” Spieth added. “I would have said 11 is the toughest hole on the course prior to the new No. 5, but if you take the bunkers out of play by hitting 3-wood, like I used to; now you’re just pushed back another 30 yards or so, 35 yards from the green, and so it’s 3-wood, 4-iron or hybrid, or you can try and hit driver and the bunkers are essentially a penalty stroke, and you still have a mid-iron in.”

Phil Mickelson is a believer in the 4-5-6 combination being devilish.

Tim Cronin / Illinois Golfer

THE LONG MARCH The bunkers on the fifth fairway seen here in 2015 have been pulled back toward the new tee to once again pose the question of risking driving over them. Only the boldest are likely to do so.

“I think that has always been a difficult stretch that you try to get through in par. You try to use the first hole, 2 and 3, try to get under par, make your way through 4, 5 and 6, and then you always looked at 7 and 8 as birdie holes. You don’t look at 7 (lengthened in 2003) as that birdie hole anymore but you try to make one up on 8 or 9 coming in.

“I think 4, 5, 6, 7 is a very difficult four-hole stretch and making a little bit harder I think is a good thing,” Mickelson added. “I always like making hard holes harder and I think guys that are playing well will be able to make par there much easier and pick up a quarter or half a stroke on the field that are not able to make par and I think ultimately, that's a good thing.

Added Rory McIlroy on Monday, "I think 5 has been a very good change ... in terms of, you know, it puts driver back in a lot of guys's hands that wouldn't necessarily hit driver on that hole. In previous years, if you hit driver up the right side, you would run out of room very quickly. Now the longer hitters might still be able to run out into the rough, but even if you hit it right you're not going to run out into those trees and the pine straw.

"So it encourages guys to hit driver, and you need to hit driver."

Like Johnson, McIlroy was hitting 4-iron in last week and 7-iron in on Monday.

"If you hit 3-wood and you're 30 yards back of that, you're on the upslope and you can hardly see the green," McIlroy said. "So you have to hit driver (off the tee), which I think is a good thing.

"They have softened a couple parts of that green, which makes it a little easier going in there with a longer club. I've always felt like the front nine here plays a shot harder than the back nine, and now it probably plays about a shot and a half harder because of the added length on 5."

The good news is, television coverage was some time ago extended to all 18 holes. The fifth hole is no longer in the shadows. This year, it might well be in the spotlight.

Staples replaces Foster at Olympia

Original architect of revision plan waylaid by smuggling conviction

BY TIM CRONIN

It was the strangest golf news in forever.

A golf course architect with a sideline as a smuggler?

Keith Foster admitted as much. The acclaimed architect, known as much for his restorations of courses as much as his original designs, pled guilty and selling and transporting endangered specials and other wildlife to sell at his antique and rare goods store in Middleburg, Va., on Dec. 19.

That, and his subsequent sentencing to 30 days in federal prison and one year of supervised release, effectively ended his architecture career, at least for the moment.

Within days, both Olympia Fields Country Club and Congressional Country Club in Bethesda, Md., two of America's leading country clubs, dropped him like he was a leper. Foster, 60, had already developed a master plan for Olympia's 36 holes, though no action is planned until after next year's BMW Championship, and was doing the same thing for the 27 holes at Congressional.

Within a month, Olympia Fields had hired Andy Staples, another architect with a restoration pedigree, to move forward – even though they had Foster's plan in hand. As it happened, Staples had experience with each of the designers of Olympia's courses. He'd refurbished Meadowbrook Country Club in Northville, Mich., a 1916 Willie Park Jr. design, the old Tripoli Country Club (now the University Club of Milwaukee), a 1921 Tom Bendelow work, and the San Jose (Calif.) Country Club, a 1924 William Watson creation.

Olympia Fields Country Club

BELL RINGER Andy Staples cited this vintage photograph of the first green on Olympia Fields Country Club's South Course as an example of the research he'll do in restoring the Tom Bendelow design. Steve Smyers also used this and similar photos in his 2007 redesign.

Two of the holes on Olympia's South Course, which Staples will tackle first, are Watson originals, while 15 of the other 16 are Bendelow holes. The other is a Steve Smyers original, which replaced the duller hole on the course but which many members say doesn't fit into the landscape or the style of the rest of the course.

"As exciting of an opportunity as this is, this is about doing the right thing for your club, and its long-term future," Staples, who hails from Milwaukee and now works out of Scottsdale, Ariz.,

wrote in a letter to Olympia's members.

While Olympia and Staples get to know each other, everyone who knew Foster now wonders who they really knew. That he ran The Outpost, an antique store on the side with his wife was common knowledge, but that he was involved in international smuggling knocked long-time acquaintances for a loop.

This was not a couple of old feathers that Foster had stuffed in his golf bag, either. According to the guilty plea filed in federal court in the Eastern District of Virginia, Foster had in a span of two months in 2017 imported between $250,000 and $300,000 of mounted birds of prey, sea turtle shells, crocodile skin bags, coral and more, all of which is illegal.

What's more, said the prosecutors, he told a customer – an undercover U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service agent – in December 2016 that he knew it was verboten to import sawfish blades, but, "Rest assured, I'm gonna bring more in. Cause I'm the only fool in the States that probably wants to risk it."

Foster's guilty plea included turning over 175 illegally-imported items, and $275,000. He was sentenced on Friday, March 8.

Foster's architecture work was widely approved. His restorations of Philadelphia Cricket Club's course, and that of the Five Farms course of Baltimore Country Club were praised by experts and those who played the layouts.

People

Troy Newport is the new general manager at Cog Hill, working alongside longtime GM Nick Mokolke, who is retiring at the end of the golf season. Newport, a PGA professional, is a 1986 Butler University graduate, and has worked at six courses, starting as an assistant pro at Innisbrook

Tom Watson via Twitter

CLASS KNOWS CLASS Two-time Masters champion Tom Watson paid a visit to the seat of fellow World Golf Hall of Famer Dan Jenkins early on Masters week. Augusta National, as it had with Atlanta Journal-Constitution veteran Furman Bisher's death a few years ago, set up Jenkins' spot in the press center as if he would be there, complete with signature chapeau. There's a hope among some writers that the building will be named after Bisher and Jenkins. The lounge has long been named after Chicago Tribune golf writer Charles Bartlett.

near Tampa, Fla., before arriving at Cog Hill on April 1. He had spent the previous three years at Ironhorse Golf Club in Leawood, Kan. Newport also spent nine years at the Onieda golf operation in Green Bay, Wis. Mokolke has worked for Jemsek Golf almost since he was in diapers. ... A big surprise came on Tuesday, April 9, when Brian Brodell announced he was leaving Mistwood Golf Club to go north and take up the general manager/head pro posting at Bull's Eye Country Club in Wisconsin Rapids. Brodell's switch to the private facility takes effect immediately.
