The Buzz

Cog Hill gets PGA juniors

For several years, Cog Hill's ownership has been looking for something that would put the big southwest suburban complex back on the national map. It has, after all, been a decade since the BMW Championship was last played there.

A year or so ago, it looked like the World Long Drive Championship was the ticket for that. Then two things happened: Golf Channel pulled its support of the WLD, and the pandemic hit. The long drivers had no way to get a sponsor with COVID on the march, and Cog Hill mothballed plans for a 700-yard runway to track the big hitters.

Now, hard work by Cog Hill president Katherine Jemsek and her staff has paid off. The PGA of America will bring its 46th junior championships to Cog in August 2022. Both the boys and girls championships will be played there from Aug. 2-5.

"Welcoming both the Boys and Girls Championships simultaneously fits precisely into Cog Hill's mission to provide access, entertainment and improvement opportunities to all golfers," Jemsek said. "We're looking forward to seeing all of the golfers and their supporters next summer."

It'll be the first national PGA competitions at Cog, which hosted the Western Open / BMW Championship all but one year from 1991 through 2012, and several times hosted USGA competitions, including the 1997 U.S. Amateur.

The PGA competitions are standard four-day tournaments with 156 players. Details haven't been announced, but it's expected the boys would play on Dubsdread, a.k.a. No. 4, with the girls on the adjacent Ravines layout, a.k.a. No. 2.

"Hosting both the Boys and Girls Junior PGA Championships at the same venue during the same week means the excitement level for junior golf will be raised dramatically," said PGA of America president Jim Richerson, who is also the senior vice president of operations for Troon in Scottsdale, Ariz. "Showcasing these young players on one of America's premier golf courses -- that has featured so many of the game's top professionals -- will make these championships a highlight of the summer."

Notable abound in the roster of players who have taken part before they became stars. Tiger Woods, Jordan Spieth, Justin Thomas and Phil Mickelson have competed on the Boys side, while the list of past Girls Junior PGA winners includes major champions Inbee Park, Yuka Saso and Lexi Thompson.

Earlier this month, the top boys junior golfers competed in the 2021 Boys Junior PGA Championship held at Kearney Hill Golf Links in Lexington, Kentucky, with Caleb Surratt of Indian Trail, N.C., earning the victory. Meanwhile, Valhalla Golf Club in Louisville will host the 2021 Girls Junior PGA Championship, July 27-30.

COVID prohibited either from being held in 2020.

The start of something big at Cog Hill?

We admit it. We're dreamers. Occasionally, our dreams are based on reality. Try this one on for size.

In 1990, when Alabama tycoon Hall Thompson stuck his foot in his mouth and said of blacks playing at Shoal Creek Country Club, "That's just not done in Birmingham, Ala," they needed defibrillators at PGA of America headquarters in Florida.

The PGA Championship was just a couple of months away, and Thompson's racist – and honest, quite frankly – remarks put the PGA in a jam. Move the PGA on such short notice? Make a deal with Thompson?

The latter happened. A prominent black businessman was convinced to accept an honorary membership at Shoal Creek, and soon, every major governing body changed its rules, cracking open the door of any country club that wanted to host a big-time tournament to men and women of color. Golf was better for it.

Before the deal was done, the phone rang at the PGA offices.

On the other end of the line: Joe Jemsek.

The owner of Cog Hill, a PGA member since the 1930s, offered Cog's Dubsdread course as an emergency site for the 1990 PGA Championship.

At this point, Dubs, known far and wide as a beast of a test for pros and amateurs, had hosted many local tournaments and some qualifiers, and a handful of U.S. Public Links Championships.

Illinois Golfer Archive

JOE KNOWS The late Joe Jemsek was the biggest booster of his Dubsdread layout.

A PGA? One of the four majors?

Jemsek knew the quality of the course – and the opportunity for the publicity that would be gained from it. The PGA said no, but months later, when the PGA Tour's new regulations meant the Western Open had to leave all-male Butler National, Cog Hill was the choice of the Western Golf Association over several notable courses, including Kemper Lakes and Wynstone.

Jemsek was right. Dubsdread provided a solid test and identified all-around players. Guys like Crenshaw, Price, Furyk, Stricker and some fellow named Woods, who won there five times.

The BMW left Cog Hill not because Stricker and Phil Mickelson didn't like Rees Jones' tweaking of the Dick Wilson-Joe Lee layout, but because the boss of BMW North America thought it would be easier to sell cars on the north shore.

Since then, owner Frank Jemsek and daughter Katherine Jemsek, who runs the day-to-day operations, have tried to bring something bog to Cog Hill.

The USGA loved Cog for logistics but then-USGA boss Mike Davis wasn't a fan of Jones' facelifts. So no U.S. Open.

Now, the PGA of America is finally coming to Cog, with next year's Junior PGAs for boys and girls. That means PGA set-up expert Kerry Haigh, who has seen Dubs and, will now see it more closely.

Dubsdread is long enough for the pros today. There's all the room needed for corporate tents, TV, and parking is across Archer Road. People know how to get there – drive by Cog any day and the parking lot is jammed with customers.

What's missing? The buzz of a big event. Say, the PGA Championship.

Golf at Cog in mid-May? Why not? There are leaves on the trees, it's not humid, and the golf is as good as it gets. Your move, PGA.

New era for an old bastion
Glen View Club hosts Western Amateur

ILLINOIS GOLFER COVER STORY

An under-the-radar club returns to the spotlight

It's not secretive, the Glen View Club. The modest wooden sign is visible from Golf Road at the traffic light that serves its entrance. By-passers know it's there. Instead, call it tucked away, secluded, adjacent to the beaten path, hidden in plain sight.

The Glen View Club has been there since 1897, and was the impetus for the little village of Golf – population 481 – in the first place, to say nothing of the railroad station that serves it, thanks to member Albert J. Earling, who was president of The Milwaukee Road, and told his engineer, “Stop at golf,” when he was of a mind to play. Without what was originally the Glen View Golf and Polo Club, the area likely would have been either tract homes or forest preserves, depending on which farmer sold to someone first.

There would be no golf, and Golf Road would have another name. But John Dewes was the farmer in question for the property – remnants of his first shack still stand between the 16th and 17th fairways – and he found the founders' proposal the most attractive.

Thus, there is a golf course for one of the Chicago area's elite clubs tucked behind the little sign and the winding driveway between the first and last holes that runs up to the hilltop clubhouse, a gingerbread-style home with nooks and crannies befitting one of the first golf hangouts in the midwest.

Elite is a word not used loosely. The great civic planner Daniel Burnham, who helped find the site for the club, was on the tournament committee. George Thorne, so enthused by what he saw that he donated the Western Amateur Trophy that was first competed for the following year at Onwentsia and is still in play, was also a member. So was William Holabird, the noted architect who designed the original clubhouse and whose son was the first course record holder. (That clubhouse burned down in 1921, but the current version was built in sympathy to the original plan.)

The 119th Western Amateur will be played on this sylvan playground from July 27-31, which brings the venerable tournament back to its roots. The first Western Golf Association championship week, comprising both the Western Amateur and Western Open, was played there in 1899 – the cover of the program issued by Earling's railroad is to the left. The layout looked then much the same as it did now, and players wore ties and jackets no matter how stifling hot it became. Willie Smith won the Western Open, then David Forgan won the Western Amateur.

Golf was just entering the modern era then, and 5,700 yards was enough of a test, whether you were an amateur or a pro. Today, when no ball park can keep the big hitters from playing driver-wedge most of the way around, the revised length of 6,928 yards for the par-70 test probably won't be enough to keep the course record of 63 from falling during stroke-play qualifying.

That's all right with the membership, though. Aside from the 100th CDGA Amateur two years ago, Glen View hasn't hosted anything on the national scene since the 1905 Western Amateur, where H. Chandler Egan of nearby Ex-moor Country Club emerged triumphant. Between the two Western Ams, Glen View hosted the 1902 U.S. Amateur and 1904 U.S. Open on the course largely designed by club pro Richard Leslie and architect-member Herbert J. Tweedie and tweaked in 1922 by William Flynn. More recently, Jim Urbina has added a bit of length – any more and some tees will be across the property line – and repositioned bunkers to more properly harass long drivers.

This Western Amateur is Glen View Club’s 21st century bow.

“What really drove it was our association with the Western Golf Association,” said Rick Waddell, the club chairman for the tournament.

Glen View Club

CLASSIC TEST The current rendition of Glen View Club follows the original 1897 routing of Richard Leslie and Herbert Tweedie, but lengthened as much as possible by Jim Urbina in a 2003 renovation. The new 420-yard tee on the 18th hole, behind the 17th green, brings the Chicago River back into play. The regular member tee of 338 yards, if used, could see big hitters trying to drive the green.

“We just felt our golf course was getting to the point, with bringing in Urbana to bring it up to modern standards, that was the major impetus to the board’s acceptance of taking on the tournament. And the membership has been very supportive. It’s just been a lot of fun to do it. There has been zero pushback.”

The 156-player field includes defending champion Pierceson Coody, two other former champs in Garrett Rank (2019) and Cole Hammer (2020), and a host of college standouts and veterans of this spring’s Walker Cup who are sure future pros. That is not a guess. The Western Amateur identifies them. Since the format began in 1956, the Sweet Sixteen – the elite group that qualifies for match play – has turned out 37 players who have won 88 of the current four majors, including new stars Collin Morikawa and Bryson DeChambeau, he of the wayward driver.

This is big.

“It’s played in the heart of the summer, right before the U.S. Amateur, and then there’s the format,” said Vince Pellegrino, the WGA’s tournament VP. “The cream rises to the top. Every year, it’s a Who’s Who of amateur golf.”

The format is simple. A PGA Tour tournament in three days, with 36 holes for the low 44 and ties the third day to determine the 16 match-play qualifiers. Then the tournament starts. That’s eight rounds over five days for the finalists, more arduous than the U.S. Amateur, where the finalists play eight rounds over seven days.

“If you ask any PGA Tour professional who’s played in the championship, they will say it’s the toughest test of amateur golf,” Pellegrino said.

There are 149 players in the field at press time, and Monday at The Glen Club, a couple of miles away, there’s a qualifying tournament for the first time since the Western Am was anchored at Point O Woods near Benton Harbor, Mich. The top seven players from that field will advance to the Western Am proper.

The field will see a par-70 course short by modern big-time tournament standards, but not without defenses. Par was lowered from 72 by converting the eighth and 15th holes to par-4s of 515 and 505 yards, respectively. But that won’t change the shot selection.

“If it’s playing firm and fast, the green complexes are interesting enough, with hole locations, to have some sort of defense,” said Kyle Bauer, the head pro who has posted a 64 there. “But, let’s be honest. There’s going to be a 61-62-63 out there somewhere.”

Bauer points to the par-3 11th as a tough green, along with the par3 second and the par-4 17th. And the uphill 18th, previously a pushover for big hitters at 338 yards, now is a formidable 420 with the West Fork of the North Branch of the Chicago River very much in play off the tee, and a false front on the green.

“That green complex is my favorite on the golf course,” Bauer said. “You can set it up to be really hard or to funnel where you might have an eagle. The final two days, you could make it drivable if you want, or play the back tee, have an 8- or 9-iron in, and anything short spins 50 yards down the hill.”

Charlie Waddell, a 36-year-old Glen View member and son of the tournament chair Rick Waddell, knows how to play the 18th, and the other 17 holes. His 64 was the post-renovation course record until Travis Smith posted a 63. The reinstated amateur will be in the Western Am field.

“It’s pretty special,” Waddell said. “The timing is really fun. There aren’t a lot of people in golf who get to play an event of this nature on their home course. It doesn’t happen. With that in mind, I’ve been working really hard and am so excited for the opportunity. I want to represent the club and the membership as well as I can.

“I believe this will be my sixth Western Am,” said Waddell, who made the 36-hole cut once. “If I can play well and use a little home-course advantage, I might be able to sneak (in).”

The WGA has arranged for live television coverage of match play on a video stream that can be accessed at www.thewesternamateur.com and golfchannel.com, with replays on Peacock and golfpass.com. Similar coverage at Sunset Ridge two years ago was the first live TV of the Western Am since 1961 in New Orleans.

50TH JOHN DEERE CLASSIC

Fits like a Glover

Erstwhile U.S. Open champ returns to winner's circle

BY TIM CRONIN

REPORTING FROM SILVIS

Lucas Glover, a thoroughbred player, is a classic mudder. He won the 2009 U.S. Open at a rain-soaked Bethpage Black in New York. Sun., July 10 at TPC Deere Run, in a persistent light rain and swirling winds, he won the 50th John Deere Classic, his first victory in over 10 years.

Glover, 41, collected his fourth PGA Tour title via a 7-under-par 64, matching the best round of the day. Four strokes behind at the start of the day and teeing off an hour before the last group, Glover birdied five holes in a six-hole stretch to break out of a roiling pack of potential winners. His 13-foot birdie putt on the par-5 17th gave him a three-stroke lead, and despite the chances for joint runner-ups Ryan Moore and Kevin Na, and all the others, especially overnight leader Sebastian Munoz, nobody could catch him.

Glover finished at 19-under-par 265. Moore and Na ended up at 267, with a quartet of players, Munoz, Adam Schenz, Luke List and Scott Brown, another stroke behind.

DEERE ONE
Lucas Glover had been a decade without lifting a trophy before he took control of the John Deere Classic.

For Glover, who last had a trophy shoved his way at the 2011 Wells Fargo Championship, the outcome was equal parts relief and renewal. But not a long time coming in his mind.

“I don’t know if delayed,” Glover said. “I think any time you win it’s gratifying. I’m also not one to think that – I’ve always been a big believer in there’s nothing guaranteed in this game. It can be easy one day and be really, really, really hard the next.

“Yeah, it’s been a difficult 10 years, but I never lost my faith, never lost my drive, never lost the self-belief. It’s a great feeling.

“I felt some good golf coming. I didn’t know how good. A lot of people, if they’re honest, would admit that sometimes it comes out of nowhere. I’ve been playing well and had some good rounds and some good finishes of late. A 63 (Friday) and a 64 in a week, proved myself right on that, I guess.”

Glover had finished fourth in the Texas Open in April and tied for eighth in the Schwab Challenge in May, but in a stretch of nine tournaments starting with Texas, he’d also missed three cuts. The Deere was the 10th tournament, and the pay-off.

“This week things just went my way, and I executed when it mattered,” Glover said.

Especially down the stretch. His inward 4-under 32 was unmatched by anyone else in the top seven.

Glover’s birdie binge started on the par-3 12th hole, immediately following his only bogey of the day – and only the fifth of the week. He ran down a 14-foot putt, then sank a four-footer on No. 13, a 6-foot, 9-incher on No. 14, and a 3-foot, 7-inch putt for a fourth straight bird on No. 15.

“They went in and I kept the pedal down,”

J.R. Howell / John Deere Classic

HOME GAME Doug Ghim of Arlington Heights closed with 3-under 68 for 13-under 271, tying for 18th.

Glover said. He nearly made a fifth straight birdie putt on the 16th, but the two-putt birdie on the 17th gave him the cushion for a two-stroke victory.

Nobody else made a real run, even though the PGA Tour decided to play “lift, clean and place,” allowing the players to put the ball in their hands, with the light rain following similar conditions on Saturday. The course was by no means soaked, merely wet. But aside from Kevin Tway’s 64 – he tied for 22nd – of all those in the top 10, only Hank Lebioda’s 6-under 65 came close to Glover’s race into red figures.

“I wanted to get it to 20 (under),” Glover said. “Push, push, push, and I think that kept me from getting complacent, from getting too nervy, because I knew it was going to take a bunch more under par.”

Glover climbed up to 79th in the world ranking with the victory. Because his U.S. Open exemption had long since run out, Glover almost was nowhere on a couple of occasions. Twice, he went to the Korn Ferry Tour finals and won his PGA Tour card anew. Now, he’s exempt through the end of the 2022-23 season, and $1,116,000 richer.

“In the grand scheme of things, I still was a pro golfer and still had a chance to get my job back,” Glover said. “You know, that was pretty low, but as far as how I kept going, it’s just self-belief and the ability to work hard, trust what you’re working on and believe in yourself, and I’ve always done that.”

Munoz opened the final round by missing the first fairway to the left and then shanking his second shot across the fairway to the right at a 90-degree angle from the green. He was able to scramble for par, but bogeyed the par-3 third and never really got going. The even-par 71 for 16-under 268 wasn’t close to what he needed or expected. It can fairly be said he lost the tournament as much as Glover won it.

“It was just an awkward lie and ... it kind of makes you think, ‘What’s going on?’ Munoz said of the shank. “Took me three holes to readjust from that and then did a good job from there.”

It seemed like this was the swan song for three-time winner Steve Stricker at the Deere, but he put a pause on that thought after his closing ever-par 71 for 9-under 275.

“I still feel like I have a win in me out here,” the always-optimistic Stricker said.

59TH RADIX CUP

Pros double up on the amateurs

BY TIM CRONIN

REPORTING FROM RIVER GROVE

The scoring system for the Radix Cup, the annual showdown between the elite of Illinois' professionals and amateurs, is simple. The two-man team that wins a side in a round earns a point. Win the match overall, win another point. So a squad can pick up three points for winning both sides, and thus the whole match.

With six matches on the course at once, only online scoring can keep an observer up to date. But the Radix lends itself to being more laid back, for taking in the day by watching from under a tree and ignoring the scoring in favor of focusing on a good shot, a player's swing, or maybe a deer rambling across a fairway.

The most recent edition – the 59th in what is usually an annual occasion at Oak Park Country Club, but what was the first in two years thanks to the COVID-19 pandemic – came down to the final match, and the 2.5 to .5 victory of professionals Jim Billiter and Carson Solien, from the Ivanhoe Club and the host club, respectively, gave the victory to the Illinois PGA side over the CDGA's youthful amateur contingent, 11-7.

Billiter and Solien won the front nine and the overall 18 holes, while foes Mike Henry and Logan Stauffer rallied to play the inward half evenly with the pros to snag their half-point.

Tim Cronin / Illinois Golfer

SHEPPARD'S PUNCH Tim Sheppard lets loose on the first tee for the amateurs in the Radix Cup.

It was the second victory in succession for the pros, and third in the last five playings, extending their lead over the amateurs. The margin is 37-20, with two ties, since the inaugural at North Shore Country Club in 1962.

The spirit of that day, conjured up by pros Bill Ogden of North Shore and Errie Ball of Oak Park to honor Harry Radix nearly 60 years ago, lives on. But the Radix isn't hit-and-giggle golf.

Diabolical pin placements on the sixth, 12th and 17th had everyone scratching their heads. Mistwood's Andy Mickelson, for instance, won the par-3 17th with a par.

"I didn't even think the pin was in the green," quipped amateur Charlie Nikitas of Glenview, he of the left-handed power move, the White Sox cap and the ponytail, of the cup on the Albert Tillingham contribution to the Donald Ross design.

Kewanee Dunes saved by new owners

BY TIM CRONIN

Some golf courses bill themselves as being out in the country.

The layout long known as Kewanee Dunes Country Club really is out in the country.

How to find it? Go to Kewanee, out in the western half of the state, south of I-80 before Geneseo beckons. Drive through Kewanee. Keep going. A couple of miles after the hard right-hand turn, you'll find it on Midland Road, past the airport and some cornfields.

There was a danger last fall that the course, which dates to 1911, was in danger of becoming a cornfield again. Longtime owner Roy Carver Jr. had decided to sell. But with a caveat.

"I'm not just not going to sell it to (just) anyone," Carver told general manager Colby Horsley.

A somebody came along in Kewanee resident Vikki Nicholas, who brought in partners from family and friends and made the deal to buy it in June.

It's Midland Golf Club now, fitting as it sits between Kewanee and Galva, and it's hopping.

"It was clear how strongly the community feels about this place," Nicholas told the Kewanee Star Courier. "It's not our intention to make a bunch of big changes."

Golf will continue to be the focus, but the tennis courts across the parking lot from the clubhouse will be refurbished, and the restaurant, which was closed when COVID-19 hit, will eventually get back to regular hours. Right now, the banquet operation is returning to normal. Horsley remains the general manager, with most of the previous staff.

Like many smaller clubs, especially away from Chicago, Midland is a hybrid operation. There's a membership, but the course is also open to the general public – making little Kewanee, population 12,500, one of the few towns that size with two courses. There's also a municipal course, Baker Park Golf Course, in town, which serves essentially the same audience.

Surratt wins Western Junior

Caleb Surratt didn't start the Western Junior with a caddie. He walked the lush fairways of the Onwentsia Club alone. In so doing, he traveled them over par. In 27 holes, he was 6-over and a good bet to miss the cut.

Then, as he passed the clubhouse, he spied someone who would turn out to be his secret weapon. His father Brent.

Dad, who had traveled with him from Matthews, N.C., was conscripted to push Caleb's bag cart for the duration. And more. He was asked to lend an ear.

"I think he was playing timid, and maybe a little scared," Brent Surratt said later, after Caleb Surratt had played the final 45 holes in 9-under to win the 103rd edition of the world's oldest junior championship. "He didn't need me for advice. He likes to talk through his shots, and I think it helped him to have someone to make him feel better and more confident about his decisions."

Much more confident, it turned out.

"We grinded hard out there," Caleb Surratt said. "The power of speaking positive and focusing on every shot goes a long way. It was all about taking as much stress off me mentally as possible."

Surratt, 17, played beyond his years in the final 36 holes on Thur., June 24, rounding Onwentsia in rounds of 65-67. The former score matched the best of the week, and both were the low score of their round. The aggregate of 8-under 132 is among the lowest final day totals since the Western Junior switched to all-stroke play in 1999.

Surratt's score of 3-under 277 earned him a four-stroke victory over William Sides of Tulsa, Okla., and Yuze Zhang of Windermere, Fla., who finished at 1-over 281 on the venerable par-70 test. Zhang fired a final-round 68 and still lost ground to Surratt. Matthew Troutman of Louisville took solo fourth at 2-over 282.

If there was a key shot down the stretch, it was the final-round 6-iron from 193 yards to inches from the cup on his penultimate hole, Onwentsia's eighth. (After 36 holes Surratt was so far back, he was in the back half of the field, and played the front nine last.)

"We'll talk about that 6-iron for the next 10 years," proud papa Brent said. "It was awesome."

Surratt poured in a dozen birdies across the double round.

"I've worked so hard on disconnecting from the result and focusing on the process," Caleb Surratt said. "That showed today."

Surratt, who will be a senior at Union Academy Charter School in the fall, was this year's Class 1A high school champion North Carolina, and has committed to Tennessee. He currently sits 427th in the World Amateur Golf Ranking, and beat an adult field in the Terra Cotta Invitational earlier in the summer. The Western Junior was his first victory in national junior play. He followed up by winning the Junior PGA.

Zhang is headed to Florida State in the fall, while Sides has his senior year of high school to negotiate before he enters Southern Methodist.

Surratt was an afterthought after 36 holes. The focus was on Max Lyons of Peoria, Ariz., whose second-round 3-under 67 in moderate breezes up to 30 miles-per-hour was the talk of the field. Four birdies in his last 17 holes gave him the lead at the halfway point. Only six other players in the 156-man field were in the 60s, compared to 15 in the first round. First round leader Garrett Endicott of San Antonio had opened with a 65, but faded to a 75 in the second round.

Piercen Hunt, whose 2019 title at Rich Harvest Farms made him duration champion when the 2020 playing was postponed a year by the COVID-19 pandemic, scored 151 and missed the cut by four strokes.

Janess takes Women's Western Junior

In 2011, it had been 34 years since an Illinois resident won the Western Women's Junior championship, the oldest title for female juveniles in the game. In that year, Ashley Armstrong triumphed on her home course, Flossmoor Country Club, the first Illinoisan to win since Mari McDougall of Midlothian in 1977.

Armstrong started a trend. There have been two Illinoisans win since: Kate Lillie of St. Charles in 2016, and on Fri., June 25, Mara Janess of Barrington.

It's far too early to say this presages a golden era of women's golf in the state, one that might match the 1970s and 1980s, when Nancy Scranton of Centralia and Penny Hammel of Decatur were winning on the LPGA circuit, but for Janess, the sky seems to be the limit.

She knocked off Katie Scheck of Greensboro, Ga., 5 and 4, in the final after a 3 and 1 semifinal victory over Addison Klonowski of Naples, Fla.

"I've been at the top of the leaderboard at a few events, but it feels good to have finally won," Janess said. "It feels amazing."

Janess never trailed in the championship match, winning the first hole and then building a 5-up lead with wins on the seventh, eighth, 10th and 11th holes. That was too much for Scheck to circumvent.

Janess finished fifth in the Illinois Amateur, and claimed the Class 2A individual title for Barrington High School in the fall of 2019.
