The ultimate golf video game?

We are not particularly wise when it comes to video game. Not having a 6-year-old under our feet, nor having a real video game in the house since Pong, the magic of video and computer games is not our strongest subject.

Once upon a time, it must be confessed, the plunge was taken and a Mac-compatible version of the Jack Nicklaus golf game was purchased and installed. The interest wasn't so much playing the game – we remember it as quirky, needing to click the touchpad just so to get the ball going down the fairway rather than careening into the rough – as it was playing with the course design option. For someone who spent countless hours drawing up golf courses on graph paper, the Nicklaus program was the next best thing to an electronic protractor.

Courses could be designed hole-by-hole, with accurate yardage, slopes, and so on. There were all manner of trees to pick from for hazards and beauty.

Naturally, the electronic doodling was first used to design an electronic replica of Augusta National, with some tweaks. With a pile of Masters programs and yardage guides, we set out duplicating the course as close as possible, but adding two sets of tees to the actual member and Masters tees, including forward tees.

It was great going until, for reasons not related to the program, the hard drive crashed. Recovering Augusta was the last thing on the mind, and two Macs later, the program is too old for the computer.

In between, EA Sports added Augusta National to its roster of courses for the Tiger Woods video game in 2011. It was there for a few years, then disappeared.

Now Augusta and EA Sports have come to the rescue with “Road to The Masters,” a game featuring Augusta and about 30 other courses at the start, including The Old Course and Pebble Beach, for PlayStation 5, Xbox Series X|S and for PC. The cover is pictured above. It goes on sale tomorrow for $69 for the regular edition at all the usual outlets. There's also a deluxe edition ($85), but must be ordered by 10:59 p.m. CT tonight.

There's no design program, which is fine. Alas, it won't be available for a Mac, which is not. There must be some graph paper here somewhere.

When Fred Ridley speaks, people listen

Who is Fred Ridley? The quick answer is that he's a very smart 70-year-old lawyer who happened to be a very good golfer – good enough to win the U.S. Amateur in 1975 – and then parlayed his interest in golf as a volunteer into, first, the hierarchy of the USGA and eventually to a membership, and the chairman, of Augusta National Golf Club.

That's the easy biography. To know him more deeply, all one need do is look at his answers to probing questions at the annual news conference he holds the day before the Masters commences. There you get the full measure of the man. Simply put, he's a traditionalist who embraces change – on his and Augusta's terms, which are just about one and the same.

Since he's been chairman, the club has created the Augusta National Women's Amateur, a big success. He presided over the purchase of land from Augusta Country Club next door so the 13th hole could be extended again. For the last time, Ridley surely hopes. Charitable contributions, which really got rolling under Billy Payne, his predecessor, have broadened, as shown by Wednesday's announcement of a partnership with the Augusta Municipal Golf Course, a scraggly layout a couple of miles away that needs some love, and now will get it. (That came as news to Jim Dent Jr., the head pro, who saw the announcement on TV.)

Ridley also announced the plan for a hospitality area for spectators – “patrons,” in the club's highfalutin' phraseology – across Washington Road from the club, on the site of a small shopping center where once stood a restaurant, The Green Jacket, which was busy one week a year. The plan is to build it in stages and have it similar to Berckmans Place, the knockout high-roller hangout to the right of the fifth fairway where the admission fee for the week is at least cool $6,000, where tickets are only available to corporate types, and which has been sold out for 10 years.

It was a rare moment of boasting for Ridley, who called it “a facility some would say is the greatest hospitality venue in all of sports.”

The more meaty comments revolved around the LIV Golf League and Greg Norman, who is not welcome at Augusta these days, though LIV players who qualified are, and the ongoing argument of the ball going too far, which triggered the multi-million purchase from Augusta Country Club in the first place.

“We did not extend an invitation to Mr. Norman,” Ridley cooed. “The primary issue and the driver there is that I want the focus this week to be on the Masters competition, on the great players that are participating, the greatest players in the world, which, by our decision in December, we ensured that we were going to honor and be consistent with our invitation criteria.

“I would also add that, in the last ten years, Greg Norman has only been here twice, and I believe one of those was as a commentator for Sirius Radio. It really was to keep the focus on the competition.”

There will not be a Christmas card headed from Ridley to Norman, it seems.

As for the ball, he said, in rather gauzy language, Augusta supports the proposed rollback of the ball by the USGA and R&A. Anyone surprised by that thinks you can walk up to the front gate today and buy a ticket.

“I think, in a general sense, we do support the proposal, but because it's in the middle of a comment period, it could change,” Ridley said. “The whole purpose of the comment period is to take the input from the industry. So we will look at the final product and make a decision.

“But generally we have always been supportive of the governing bodies. I've stated that we believe distance needs to be addressed. I think the natural conclusion is, yes, we will be supportive.”

As for the expansion of the 13th to 535 yards, Ridley believes it's a stopgap effort.

“It didn't take long, if at all, to catch up to (previous) changes,” he recalled of earlier lengthings. “And I suspect the same thing will happen here.”

Spoken carefully, like a smart lawyer.

87TH MASTERS TOURNAMENT PREVIEW

A Masters unlike any other

Meeting of PGA Tour and LIV stars sets the majors apart

TEXT AND PHOTOGRAPHY BY TIM CRONIN

In a normal year, the focus on the Masters on the eve of the first round would be spread across three topics: the lengthened 13th hole, the prospects of Scottie Scheffler repeating, and the quest of Tiger Woods to rewrite history on one good leg.

This is not a normal year. Not even close. Since LIV Golf debuted last year, the small world of men's professional golf has been in turmoil. Players leaving from the PGA Tour were banned from their old hangout. They no longer received points in the world ranking, which helps determine the fields for the four majors. Lawsuits and insults have been thrown back and forth in ample amounts.

Now comes the Masters at ever-genteel Augusta National Golf Club, where you never hear a crow squawk or a baby cry.

Nobody has been banned from the Masters, or the other three majors, for that matter (which makes the Players Championship, the PGA Tour's big prize and a competition that had been edging closer to major status in the minds of many, decidedly minor, a closed shop).

Dustin Johnson, Phil Mickelson, Brooks Koepka – who comes in as LIV's latest winner after triumphing before family, friends and a few nonchalant spectators last week just outside of Orlando – Patrick Reed and about a dozen more LIVers are in the field this week.

Cameron Smith, the current British Open champion, and who was denied an opportunity to defend his 2022 Players title, has a shot at winning. So does Johnson. Likewise Koepka. Mickelson, Patrick Reed, Sergio Garcia, not so much. But they're in the field on merit, in each case playing against their PGA Tour peers in most cases for the first time since signing with the Saudi-backed circuit last year. Mickelson played and missed the cut in both the U.S. Open and British Open last year, after skipping the Masters and PGA Championship.

American professional sports hasn't seen anything like this – competitors from another circuit playing in their old circuit – in decades. Yes, the Masters is independent, but it's as much a part of the traditional calendar on both the PGA Tour and European circuit as the tournaments run by those bodies.

The closest parallel is the 1979 Indianapolis 500, and many of the subsequent runnings. In that case, many leading car owners fed up with the smallish purses and curious procedures of the United States Auto Club formed their own group, Championship Auto Racing Teams. When the breakaway owners entered the 500, USAC, the sanctioning body, denied their entries. A court case followed and the CART owners won. They also dominated the race, and after a few years of rival racing, all the USAC-sanctioned races except the 500 fell into the CART fold.

That battle was renewed when Tony George, owner of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, started the Indy Racing League in 1996. This time, it took five years for a CART team to run in the 500, more followed, and George won the fight. CART, relabeled Champ Car, folded after the 2008 season, ending a 30-year argument.

Will the scrap between LIV and the PGA Tour last 30 years? Certainly, as long as cars and planes run on refined fuel, the cash will be there for the Saudi Arabian government to finance the LIV series, though it has been reported the Saudis want to see a return on their investment within five years.

The ideal scenario for LIV would be for a couple of their players to be on the leader board when the leaders came to the back nine on Sunday, and for one of them to win. That would be the rough equivalent of the New York Jets winning Super Bowl III and bringing a measure of respect, if not equality, to the American Football League, which had been started nine years earlier.

The Masters is being held 10 months after the LIV debut in London, but the feeling is a bit like before the original Super Bowl in January 1967, when the Green Bay Packers were supposed to throttle the AFL's Kansas City Chiefs. The upstarts hung around for a half, and the Packers took care of them, much to the relief of the other NFL owners, in the second half.

One can imagine PGA Tour commissioner Jay Monahan, whose hard-line opposition to LIV overtures even before the group was a public rumor has never wavered, feeling a bit like an NFL owner over 50 years ago: confident but with a queasy stomach.

The competitors may feel much the same when they stand on the 13th tee if the wind is against them, as it might be given a weather forecast that eliminates the sun and warmth come the weekend. What had for a few big hitters been a 3-wood and 8-iron to what effectively become a par 4 1/2 will now be a driver and a long iron again, or perhaps a lay-up if the tee shot doesn't go as intended.

The old 510-yard tournament tee – already 55 yards behind the member tee – was no longer the entrance to a three-shot hole, thanks to continuing improvements in clubs, balls, and player fitness. It was an automatic two-shotter for anyone who hit the fairway. The extension to 545 yards brings the debate on whether going for the green, with the stream wiggling in front of it, is a wise move.

Mickelson, whose 6-iron out of the pine straw to the green in 2010 is the stuff of legend, doesn't see that happening again.

"It's tough because it's hard to get past the corner to have a shot at the green and not be blocked out by the trees; for me anyways," Mickelson said Tuesday. "And we played the front of the tee box today. I think in perfect conditions it's probably right on. I think with it being wet, it will be hard to go for it and probably not as risk/reward positive to go for it because the greens are soft and you can still chip it close and it's not re-

"Conversely you can come into that green with a longer club and stop it. I don't know if I'm long enough to come around the corner and have a clear shot. I tried it today, but I have to hit such a big slice. Rather than hit a low rounded cut, I might have to rip one and get it past the corner. I don't know if it's really worth the risk for me. I'm a decent wedge player."

As for Scheffler, he's his usual low-key self. He rolled into Augusta on Sunday morning rather than Sunday afternoon.

"As far as my preparation goes, I've kept things pretty similar to what they were last year, outside of getting here a few hours earlier on Sunday so I could play more golf," Scheffler said. "When the tournament starts on Thursday, everybody starts even par. Just because you're defending doesn't mean I get to start at 1-under. I'll be approaching it just like I do a lot of other tournaments."

Then there's Woods, by no means a favorite. Nor was he in 2019, when he played steady on the back nine when others were falling apart. Last year, 14 months after nearly losing a leg in his car accident, he made the cut. But he said he wonders how long he'll play Augusta.

"I didn't know, last year was kind of -- I didn't know if I was going to play again at that time," Woods said. "For some reason everything kind of came together and I pushed it a little bit and I was able to make the cut, which was nice.

"Yeah, I don't know how many more I have in me. So just to be able to appreciate the time that I have here and cherish the memories."

The memory book opens again this morning.

Bardgett leaving Illini for PGA Tour job

FROM IG NEWS SERVICES
REPORTING FROM CHAMPAIGN

Illinois men's golf head coach Mike Small announced Wednesday that assistant coach Justin Bardgett has accepted a new role, as Director of Collegiate Relations with PGA Tour University, and will leave the Illinois program after the Fighting Illini's 2023 postseason.

"Illinois men's golf is very happy and excited for Justin as he embarks on a new and exciting career path," Small said in a release. "Justin has done an excellent job as our men's assistant coach, and his coaching talents will surely be missed. Head coaches always feel a sense of pride when their players and/or staff find growth and satisfaction in their professional lives, and I know that Justin will continue to do great things in his new career path with PGA Tour University."

Bardgett has been a vital part of Small's program for the past four years since joining the Illini prior to the start of the 2019-20 season. During his tenure, the St. Louis native helped Illinois extend its streak of consecutive Big Ten Championships to a conference record seven with titles in 2020-21 and 2021-22 after the abrupt cancellation of the 2019-20 campaign due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The Illini competed in the NCAA Regionals in both 2021 and 2022, qualifying for the 2021 NCAA Championship where they advanced to match play and notched a top-5 national finish as a team for the seventh time since 2011.

Bardgett has helped the Illini capture 13 team tournament titles and four individual wins.
